Deputy Principal

I joined Cornerstone in 2016, to be head of the growing Secondary school.

My passion is to see teenagers grow as individuals and grow in their faith. My year studying theology in England taught me how important it is to wrestle with the meaning of scripture, and how rich and full of meaning it is. Coming from a single parent home, I am also passionate about helping students through the challenges they each face in the turbulent teenage years.

I started my teaching at Feilding High School before moving to Palmerston North Boys High School where I ran a successful commerce department. I believe that we as teachers can bring the best ideas from our previous schools to the Cornerstone culture.

In my spare time, I am energised by spending time with my three primary school aged children. My wife Helen and I also enjoy a quiet latte or movie together.
